Established June 1, 2026

DcodingX Corporation (hereinafter referred to as the "Company") develops AI-enabled systems and software services utilizing AI technology, and sells services under its "Den.Ai Business," which was launched in June 2026. In operating our business, we consistently exercise the utmost care in protecting personal information. In light of the frequent incidents and accidents involving personal information leaks in recent years, we reaffirm that protecting and managing personal information is a fundamental responsibility directly related to our business activities. We hereby declare that all employees will undertake the following measures.

1. The Company shall appropriately acquire, use, and provide personal information in consideration of the nature and scale of its business. The Company shall not handle personal information beyond the scope necessary to achieve the specified purposes of use and shall take measures to ensure this.
2. The Company shall strictly manage personal information and shall not disclose or provide data to third parties except where prior consent has been obtained. The Company shall prevent unauthorized access to, loss, alteration, destruction, or leakage of personal information. If an incident or accident such as a leakage occurs, the Company shall respond promptly, investigate the cause, and take corrective action.
3. The Company shall comply with laws and regulations, government-issued guidelines, and other standards applicable to the handling of personal information held by the Company.
4. If a complaint or consultation concerning the handling of personal information is received, the Company shall investigate the matter and endeavor to address it promptly.
5. The Company shall continually improve its personal information protection management system, including the management structure and mechanisms for protecting personal information.
